HOW TO

Repaint wooden furniture

FAMOUS FOR HARDWARE since 1903

A new coat of paint is an easy way to breathe new life into an old chair or piece of furniture. It's simple: a few basic tools and some time. This is an ideal weekend project, and the transformation will surprise you! Paint expert, Peter shows us how to repaint a chair.

PAINT GUIDE

To start, grab a piece of 100-grit sandpaper. Sand with (not against) the grain of the wood, enough to break the surface of the top layer.

After sanding, remove any residue with a turpentine cloth. Dust acts like grease and will cause your paint to lift later.

Use a primer for an even look. Using a paintbrush, gently brush an even coat on the surface of the wood. You only need to apply one coat of primer. Allow the primer to dry before painting.

Apply the topcoat using a water-based enamel of your choice. It's best to apply two coats. Remember to stir the paint before use, and to use a soft brush for an even finish.

Leave the chair in an open area to dry. To clean your brushes, use water for water-based paints (plastic container), and mineral turpentine for solvent-based ones (steel container). Never use thinners to clean wooden furniture.
